Editor's Letter

I would like to welcome all readers and subscribers to this, our 11th edition of Britain, My Nation and thank you all for your continued support. As a result of our networking at recent conferences our subscriber base is steadily increasing but unfortunately so are our costs. Several donations have been gratefully received and have helped towards those costs but unfortunately we have to mention again that it is becoming increasingly difficult to maintain the affordability of our magazine on subscriptions alone so any help that can be made will provide us with the security to enable us to carry on publishing.

As mentioned in my last Editor's Letter it is now conference season and I had the pleasure of attending the recent Heritage and Destiny (see report on pages 6 and 7). At the conference I took the opportunity of having a photograph taken (see right) with the editors of other Nationalist magazines currently available. In the photograph, from left to right, are Mark Badrick (The Supplement), Steve Frost (Broadsword), Yours Truly, Mark Cotterill (Heritage and Destiny) and Colin Todd (Candour). Advertisements for all of these magazines can be found on page 19, and all are recommended.

As mentioned above, interest in Britain, My Nation is increasing and we are pleased to announce that we have several new writers in the pipeline with articles from them appearing in future editions. We look forward to publishing Just Another Yeoman with his series of articles under the heading of The Veil Falls starting in the next edition of our magazine, with others to come, so trust that you will enjoy these new writers.

We here at Britain, My Nation were extremely pleased and encouraged to see the huge attendance at the recent Unite The Kingdom rally in London (see In The News) as we also were with the Raise The Colours Campaign (also see In The News). On the former, we appreciate that it was organised by Tommy Robinson, who, with his ties to Israel and the suspicion regarding his funding sources, causes many Nationalists to doubt where his allegiances actually lie. However it has to be said that because he has achieved what no-one else has, in bringing on to the streets of our capital, so many of the, as the government would have it, "far right patriots," it can only mean a positive result for Britain. With regards the latter campaign, it adds a certain feel-good factor seeing Union Flags flying in so many places. Long may it continue!

Reader's will know that our intention in publishing Britain, My Nation is to draw together all strands of Nationalism in an attempt to unite us and strengthen our efforts to turn this country around but it is an uphill struggle, and evidence suggests that more of our people are prepared to put their heads above the parapet.

Britain, My Nation is only be available by post on subscription and not via the internet or by email. Articles, letters, newspaper cuttings, and general comments for consideration for inclusion in future editions are welcomed, but please include your name and address if sending items (items will not be published without senders details, and these will not be published unless advised otherwise). Please send by email to: - britainmynation@yahoo.com

by post to: - The Editor, Britain, My Nation, 10 Washpool, SWINDON, Wiltshire, SN5 3PN

We are planning on publishing Britain, My Nation for some time to come, but we can only do so with support from Nationalists within our community. As said above, we are truly grateful for the support and encouragement we have received to date but there is always more we can do, with donations being particularly helpful and very much appreciated. Please also make sure you mention Britain, My Nation to your friends, family and political comrades and perhaps order a couple of extra copies that you can distribute as samples. Thank you all once more.

In the News – 1

The highlight of the past few months in terms of British patriotism, if not necessarily full-blown Nationalism, was the UNITE THE KINGDOM DEMONSTRATION HELD IN LONDON on Saturday 13th September, that we mentioned in our last edition. Estimates of those attending range from 110,000 to 3 million. Looking at the footage we would estimate at least 500,000 and probably more. The demonstration was organised by Tommy Robinson, a man who has achieved a great deal in terms of raising awareness of the problems of Islam and the grooming gangs, for example. However, many Nationalists have a distrust of him as a result of his allegiance to Israel. Speakers at the event included Katie Hopkins, Ben Habib, Ant Middleton and many others including politicians from Europe, including from the AfD. Representatives of several Nationalist groups, including Britain First, The Homeland Party, Patriotic Alternative and UKIP also attended the event. The mainstream media dubbed this as a march of the "far right", as usual, in order to make it seem as if the event was something sinister and dangerous. They even reported that there had been 26 arrests, as though this was a huge problem. It was later reported by the Metropolitan Police that only 8 were attributed to the marchers, with the other 18 being from the opposing protest! The media referred to those 26 arrested as "far right thugs", which shows their bias compared to the Notting Hill Carnival where there were 423 arrests at the event referred to by the media as "a wonderful celebration of community and culture". Robinson has promised more marches, so the situation looks to prove an interesting one.

Last month's we also reported on a report of ROBINSON'S ALLEGED ASSAULT OF MAN IN ST PANCRAS TRAIN STATION IN LONDON. Recently Robinson posted on social media that no charges were to be brought and his version of events, such that he was defending himself, seem to be correct.

A group of men from Birmingham have been responsible for the RAISE THE COLOURS MOVEMENT that has rapidly spread nationally and also gained global recognition. The movement began as a result of the strength of feeling that the British are being side-lined in our own nation and the consequent need for us to assert our right to be proud of our nation and in flying our flag. Flags of our nation can now be seen flying from lamp-posts and motorway bridges across the country. However, not everyone is happy about it, including Prime Minister Starmer, who has essentially said that he is happy for flags to be flown but not if they are flown to cause divisiveness. He may well have forgotten that this is Britain and if British flags are flown here and are considered by some to be divisive we would suggest those people have the problem and so should perhaps move to a more accommodating country. Also the local council in the small town of Purton, close to where Britain, My Nation is produced, took down the flags put up 24 hours earlier, on the basis that they were a health and safety risk. They stated that there was a possibility the flags may become detached and fall upon car windscreens thereby obstructing the view of the driver and causing an accident – we kid you not!

In the News - 2

Rumour is rife that Prime Minister Starmer will resign, if not before Christmas, then certainly next year as his lying and incompetence is even angering staunch Labourites. The latest news suggests that Greater Manchester Mayor Andy Burnham is being pressed to challenge Starmer for the party leadership. Starmer's latest masterstroke is his PLAN TO INTRODUCE MANDATORY DIGITAL ID's FOR ALL ADULTS. He has suggested they are necessary as part of his crackdown on illegal immigration, saying that a digital ID will be a requirement to work in the future and be introduced by 2029. This is clearly ludicrous, as we already have the means to prove we are eligible to work, passports and driving licences come to mind but also a National Insurance number is required. It also begs the question of how it can be a mandatory system if millions of our people have no access to the tools needed for a digital ID. There must be a more sinister motive and a plan for more government control comes to mind! Already a petition has been raised against this move, so look for DO NOT INTRODUCE DIGITAL ID CARDS on the government petition internet page. At the time of writing the number of signatures to this petition were more than 2 million, so please add your signature if you haven't already. This may well be the catalyst for Starmer to go, as if he pushes forward with this I see civil unrest to surpass that we saw when the Poll Tax was introduced.

Other worrying news has been that the UK RECORDS SECOND BIGGEST ANNUAL POPULATION JUMP IN 75 YEARS. As readers will probably realise, this jump is not down to an increase in the birth rate of the white indigenous population but is said to be largely due to international migration, so in other words, illegal immigration and the birth rate of the aliens amongst us. The actual increase is said to be more than three-quarters of a million, with the Office of National Statistics estimating a record 69.3 million people in the UK in the middle of 2024. This jump is apparently the largest since 1949 when circumstances were very much different. Then the increase was not down to the immigration of those from Asia and Africa and so this should prove worrying. The birth-rate of Asians and Africans is far higher than that of our own people so unless drastic and urgent action is taken we can be in no doubt that we will become the minority population in our own homeland soon, a situation that should horrify us all.

In our last edition we reported on the NEW PARTY LED BY EX-LABOUR LEADER, JEREMY CORBYN – YOURPARTY. However, despite a seemingly successful start all appears to have gone awry as an email was issued advising, those interested, how to sign up for membership. This email was quickly followed by another saying the initial email had been sent by mistake. Consequently there was a falling out between Zarah Sultana and Corbyn as Sultana allegedly claims that the party is led by misogynists. I'm sure this has nothing to do with the other four members of the leadership team mentioned in our previous report, all apparently being Muslim men, as we feel sure that they would treat women equally!

Finally, we end this article with sad news as we have to report on the DEATHS OF SEVERAL LONG-STANDING NATIONALISTS in the last couple of months. BILL BAILLIE, aged 80, one of the last surviving members of Sir Oswald Mosley's Union Movement remained involved politically all of his life, latterly writing a monthly blog, the last of which was sent out on the 31st July. We here at Britain, My Nation were particularly saddened by this as Bill had been very supportive of our relatively new venture in publishing this magazine. One of his emails to us said "I wish you good luck with your venture. It's brave of you to publish a hard-copy magazine with postal and printing costs rising. I hope that fortune favours the bold". Bill's blogs are still available on the internet and worthy of a read. See:- https://nationrevisited.blogspot.com and https://europeanoutlook.blogspot.com. STEVE BLAKE, aged 61, also died. Steve was of late Treasurer of Patriotic Alternative, but probably better remembered by readers for his work with the BNP running the party website during their most successful years. KEITH AXON was another political stalwart, having been a John Tyndall loyalist and National Front and BNP activist. As mentioned on page 6, Keith was due to Chair the Heritage and Destiny Conference but passed away a week or so before. All fine and true Nationalists who will be missed. RIP Gentlemen!

Sunday 7th September 2025, Preston, Lancashire
Souvenir Programme
The Roots of the British
This year's H&D meeting is both a memorial where we will be remembering those nationalists who have passed away since our last meeting in September 2023, and a book launch for the second edition of Steve Brady's Roots of the British, which was first published thirty-five years ago, back in 1990.
We are again looking to the future as well as remembering the past, which is reflected in this year's line up of speakers who represent a number of different nationalist parties and groups, who remain active throughout the British Isles.
Here in Preston today, we are honouring and remembering John Tyndall who sadly passed away twenty years ago. Although in a rival nationalist party to Steve Brady (who was a leading member of the NF) at the time of its publication, JT (who was the BNP leader) had a copy of Roots of the British on his bookcase, and spoke very highly of Steve when I last contacted him after returning from a trip to the USA at the end of 1993.
I like many other nationalists clashed and had my differences with John Tyndall over the years. However, I am pleased to say that we made our peace a year or two after I returned from the States in the early noughties and we worked closely together for the final few years of his life.
John Tyndall, as he would admit himself, was far from perfect, however unlike many of our so-called "leaders" he was a honest, reliable, and extremely hard working man, who devoted the majority of his live to the cause. JT – we salute you here today.
Mark Cotterill, Editor, Heritage and Destiny magazine.

On Sunday 7th September at a venue in a suburb of Preston in Lancashire, approximately 80 Nationalists, from a range of political parties and organisations, assembled at the Heritage and Destiny Memorial Meeting and Book Launch (of a revised edition of The Roots of the British, an excellent publication, written by Steve Brady, first in 1990, now updated by H&D Editor Mark Cotterill). Many of the speeches were consequently based on the theme of Britishness. Britain, My Nation editor embarrassingly admits this was the first time attending one of these events even though they have been held annually (but not last year) for the last 20 years. The meetings began as a result of the demise of John Tyndall, by way of a memorial to him, as well as to all other Nationalists who have left us. Significantly for this meeting, this sadly included Keith Axon who had chaired all but one of the previous meetings. Peter Rushton took on the role this time and began with a roll-call of Nationalists who have left us in the last few years, a list which was sadly far too long, and followed this with a minute's silence.

The first speaker of the day was Benny Bullman, lead singer of the band Whitelaw and also a British Movement activist. In his speech Benny included a tribute to Ian Stuart, the front-man for the very much under-rated band Skrewdriver, and a man who was taken from us, in mysterious circumstances.

Next speaker was Julian Leppert, a former councillor on Epping Council, for both the BNP and For Britain. Epping has been in the news lately regarding the use of a local hotel for illegal immigrants. Julian gave an interesting talk on the Epping situation informing the meeting that, along with Eddy Butler, they had highlighted the problem around five years ago. Videos of this can be found on YouTube by searching for "Epping Migrant Hotel Scandal". Julian also rightly promoted his new book Into The Furnace, a brief history of the British National Party and his journey through the winning years 2002-2012 (see advertisement on page 19). Julian said we have to work at changing the minds of fellow citizens in order not to be afraid to say it like it is and that we should no longer be on the defensive but on the offensive.

Third speaker was Professor John Kersey, an intellectual who spoke on Survival Strategies for the Indigenous British. He explained the threats that exist including the deliberate destruction of the fabric of our nation, creating a nation that is totally dependent on the state. He spoke on how the people are controlled via bread and circuses and that there is no common moral foundation, however it now seems this is all being resisted as our concerns are now seeping in to mainstream dialogue.

This was followed by a lunch break, a buffet lunch that was superb and plentiful, and allowed those in attendance to mingle and also to view the various merchandise and literature stalls. On return from lunch Peter Rushton read out a message of support from Spanish Nationalist Isabel Peralta, who for legal reasons, was unable to attend in person.

Next speaker of the day was Laura Towler, deputy leader of Patriotic Alternative and wife of Sam Melia whose imprisonment was reported in Edition 2 of BMN. Laura spoke about the progress of PA and its role as a British advocacy movement, supporting political prisoners being one example of their work. Laura also spoke about what it means to be British, questioning why it seems acceptable to the establishment that anyone can seemingly be called British, but deemed wrong that, unless ethnically qualified, people could not be called any other nationality, for example, even though Joanna Lumley was born in India, she could not be Indian.

Heritage and Destiny Memorial Meeting – 2025 contd.

The next speaker was Dr James Lewthwaite, Chairman of the British Democrats and former BNP councillor (see Edition 6 of BMN and the article 'Introducing Dr James Lewthwaite'). Dr Lewthwaite spoke on the progress and growth of his party and their determination to follow a democratic path. He said that civic nationalism will ultimately fail as people are happier in a country where the people are of the same ethnicity, thereby avoiding the conflicts that so-called multi-culturalism creates.

Peter Molloy, an independent Nationalist councillor in Spennymoor, County Durham, spoke next. Peter said that although he stands as an independent he is still scrutinised by the left, but still continues his involvement in his community exclusive of his Nationalist agenda. He provided an example of his local miner's gala that has traditionally been a part of local heritage and culture, and at which he was in attendance as a local councillor, but stated that the gala has recently become politicised by the left partly due to demographic changes.

Another long-standing Nationalist, Paul Rimmer, of the National Housing Party UK, was the next speaker. He said that it is impossible for the country to maintain funding for immigration at the current rate. Regarding being British he said that being born as such is like winning the first prize in the lottery of life, with the British contributing immensely to world civilization. He said that others should have respect for that fact and recognise that being British is something special. Paul continued by saying that the decline of our nation began with the outbreak of World War I in 1914 with the betrayal of the people of Europe, as our leaders sent off our people to slaughter each other and thereby began the process of destroying us as a race.

Steve Frost, National Secretary of the British Movement was the penultimate speaker. Steve spoke about the need for revolution from below through activism and propaganda via community work, which BM are increasingly involved with. Steve said we should still have hope for the future as the mainstream parties are beginning to panic as cracks appear in society. Steve gave the examples of the recent immigration hostel demonstrations and the raising of our flag campaigns which have both energised our people, our folk. He said that the left, playing on the myth of the Windrush generation, are actively seeking to destroy us but we are now seeing just the beginning of our people fighting back.

Final speaker was Conference Chairman, Peter Rushton, (Editor – who I first heard speak in August 2001 at the British National Party's 2nd annual Red, White and Blue festival in Wales and who is always a pleasure to listen to). Peter said that the globalists and wokeists are destroying the true British and so we must stand together against the alien invader. He said that a tide of resistance has begun and there is a need for us to continue to build our movement to prepare for the coming struggle.

Mark Cotterill, the conference organiser, then closed the meeting thanking all for being there, but did suggest that with decreasing numbers attending this may well be the last H&D Conference. If this is true then it will be a huge shame, as by bringing such a wide variety of Nationalists from different parties and organisations together it provides a much needed boost, not only to Nationalists attending, but also to others throughout the land, who see, via social media and various Nationalist publications, that there are those who are prepared to stand up and take on this fight to preserve our race and nation, providing hope and encouragement for the future.

The conference ended with a feeling of optimism that the fight back has now truly begun. Congratulations to all involved in the organisation of this great event.

Freedom of Information Act 2000

The Freedom of Information Act 2000 (the FOIA) was intended to create transparency in the public sector and has proved most useful to Nationalists over the years in substantiating claims made by our policy-makers and also for propaganda purposes. The FOIA was taken advantage of by the Britain, My Nation editor along with the late Tom Linden, back in British National Party days when they worked together, defining the questions to be asked, of whom, the subsequent managing of the responses and how to utilise the information to our benefit.

Over the years this Act has enabled enquirers to obtain a lot of useful information that would not normally be seen by the public and has allowed Nationalists to substantiate claims we might make about the impact, for example, of immigration and actions taken by public bodies which are contradictory to what is actually required to maintain a Britain for the British. In this, the last in our series for a while, we look at a few of the more recent attempts at obtaining information.

As a result of public concern regarding the costs to the NHS relating to immigration and 'woke' related nonsense, last year we asked the following of NHS England, the body responsible for the management of the NHS in England:-

We asked – Can you please advise the total NHS expenditure on translating services in each of the last 10 years? Also can you please advise the percentage of total spend and actual figures paid for salaries of diversity and inclusion managers in each of the last 10 years?

NHS England replied saying that – NHS England does not hold the information you have requested. NHS England cannot provide total NHS Expenditure for the last 10 years on Translation Services. This is not a nationally captured category of expenditure. You would need to go out to every NHS organisation to request the data they hold on this question. The reply continued – Most translation services situations would be between patients and carers in clinical settings. This is not activity paid for by NHS England. Bizarrely their reply continued with – NHS England might be able to provide details of how much NHS England has spent on translation services in the last 10 years. Finally, on the second question, they replied – With regards to your question about Diversity and Inclusion staff and costs NHS England could only supply information about its own business activities not the NHS in total.

So there we have it, the body that is supposedly managing the NHS is unable, or unwilling, to provide information on certain types of expenditure. It seems highly unlikely that this information is not available but if it is not being collected then it is a sad indictment on the NHS and it will help users understand why the service is no longer fit for purpose. Our Britain, My Nation Editor spent the last 20 years of his career working at various levels within the NHS mainly in management positions, with some of that time being in the finance directorate of the Department of Health, so knows full well that all forms of expenditure are managed in order to ensure that the budgets allocated are not exceeded. Consequently, as alluded to in earlier articles, it seems that certain organisations are now working to avoid answering questions that may cause political embarrassment. A shocking state of affairs considering the reasons the Freedom of Information Act was established in the first instance.

Another avoidance tactic is to state that the costs of providing the information is prohibitive. A recent example of this has been forwarded to us via the Traditional Britain Group. The query was – Is it true that there is a '700-member Home Office Islamic Network' which works to promote the recruitment, retention and progression of Muslim staff in the Home Office? The Home Office reply included the following – I am unable to confirm whether the Home Office does hold information within the scope of your request. Under section 12(2) of the FOIA, the Home Office is not obliged to comply with an information request where to do so would exceed the appropriate limit. They continued that they estimate the cost of providing this information would – exceed the £600 limit specified (in the Regs). As far as we can see a simple yes or no would have answered this query, but the Home Office, by providing the answer they have, appear to either not know the answer (unlikely!) or know full well the answer but do not provide it for politically motivated reasons.

We believe that all governments, in recent years, are tailoring their responses to suit their policies. The people have a massive distrust in government, more so recently because of the fact that Prime Minister Starmer cannot seemingly utter a word without being caught out as a liar. This is particularly noticeable with regard to immigration and the failure to address the problem despite numerous promises to do so and the many ludicrous claims that they are managing to control the problem. The FOIA itself seems no longer fit for purpose!

Which Nationalist Party? (1 of 4)

Regular readers will know that our primary objective, here at Britain, My Nation, is to encourage the Nationalist community to work together towards our common goal. Having recently attended the Heritage and Destiny Conference we have seen how easy it is for fellow Nationalists of different persuasions to meet and socialise together and we feel that, with not too much effort, a closer relationship can be achieved in the movement. Ultimately we would like to see all Nationalists gather under the one banner and we believe that closer alliances will be formed in the next few years, if not before. There has never been such a feeling of betrayal that the British people currently and are seeking change and it would be better to achieve this through an organised and peaceful route than the alternative, which we see as massive civil unrest.

Our goal, as Nationalists, is to see our nation return to our demographic and world position of 60 years ago, when Britain was the envy of the world due to the achievements of our indigenous population. Whilst we continue with the large number of Nationalist parties and movements that currently exist, together with the 'big fish in small pond' syndrome, we are wasting valuable time that could be used in dealing with our problems.

Our regular 4-page article looks at those political parties and groups who should be and in the main are, working to that end in the hope that we can form alliances to more effectively do the job we need to do.

In the past we have taken a brief look at the main policies of each of the groups below but now report on what we consider newsworthy items where we become aware of them. We have also begun to weed out those groups who contribute zero to our movement and will add new organisations that may potentially help our cause.

We are optimistic that Britain, My Nation will have some impact or influence, however small that may be, on the unification of the Nationalist movement. Even if that impact is small, at least we can say that we are making the effort – perhaps other Nationalists need to ask themselves whether or not they are doing the same and they are involved in the movement for the right reasons.

Advance UK

As reported in our last edition party leader, Ben Habib, had set a target for recruiting 30,000 members before action would be taken to register the party with the Electoral Commission. The party website reports that on the 6th September this target was reached and the process for applying to the EC has begun. As well as that Habib had promised to donate £100,000 to party funds and this has also been done. The party website states that "We have a sizeable and motivated membership. We are campaign-ready. And with cash in the bank, we are a formidable political force". It is uncertain how the party will develop, or how it will fit into the current political landscape particularly being a more hard-line civic Nationalist party than Reform UK but it is led by a Pakistani. At his recent Unite the Kingdom rally, Habib, was one of the speakers and Tommy Robinson has come out in support and has joined the party. Progress will be watched with interest.

British Democratic Party

The party still continues to punch above its weight with an estimated membership, based on Electoral Commission accounts, of a couple of hundred at most. Their social media presence is impressive and with the party conference taking place in Hertfordshire on Saturday 25th October, with "a distinguished line-up of speakers" it remains to be seen how successful this will be.

Britain First

Britain First continue to involve themselves in patriotic protests including the Unite the Kingdom march and the immigrant hostel protests. News just in is that party leader and deputy, Paul Golding and Ashlea Simon were detained by police for three hours in Altrincham, Greater Manchester as they were campaigning on their "battle bus" adorned with "Keir Starmer is a w" banners. They were released without charge despite seemingly being desperate to do so but with no evidence! The police advised they would impound the vehicle if it was seen again displaying the banners and this threat was carried out as the party drove it in the locality of the recent Labour Party conference. Golding's tactics seem quite abrasive but they do seem to draw attention and create publicity for the party. On that theme, back in the middle of August, the party Telegram page posted that Golding would meet with Mohammed Hijab, a renowned Islamic preacher, for an MMA (mixed martial arts) fight. It seems this has now been set for the 11th of October and is to be livestreamed. We are unsure what it is hoped that will be achieved but, again, it will provide good publicity, for Golding and Britain First. The party conference will also be taking place soon and is booked for Saturday 29th November at a venue in Sutton Coldfield, with "famous patriotic guest speakers", "a patriotic sing-song" and an activist's award ceremony.

Which Nationalist Party? (2 of 4)

British Movement

BM activity appears to be on the increase as it carries out regular community building activities, with a recent Great British NS Summer Clean Up campaign, clearing litter in many areas. The campaign appears to be going well and has received plenty of interest on social media. On top of that the Emblem on-line magazine (as well as hard-copy magazine Broadsword) and the Under the Sunwheel monthly podcast appear regularly.

Christian Nationalist Party (see British Freedom Party)

Again no changes appear to have been made to the party website, where most people would initially seek out information. Occasional emails are sent out however, attempting to encourage recipients to join and also to claim free flags in support of the Raise the Colours campaign. There is little evidence of anything other than an on-line presence and, with the involvement of Griffin and Dowson, something doesn't quite seem right as what the party hope to achieve is a difficult question, but one we will continue to review.

English Democrats

The party website hasn't been updated since May although posts on X (was Twitter) appear daily. These are generally either reposts or comment on news, nothing regarding party activity can be found. Therefore it is unsurprising that their following has dropped by nearly 20% over recent months. It is increasingly difficult to see the English Democrats retaining any political relevance.

Heritage Party

With no less than 13 advertised speakers the party conference took place near Newport on the 29th September. Videos of several of the speeches appear on the party Telegram platform and although no images of the audience can be seen, it seems the conference was well-managed and attended and according to the party "was a great success". Party leader David Kurten has a good media presence and this undoubtedly helped. Many of the speeches were on environmental issues and it seems that the Heritage Party is the Green Party of Nationalism but without the communism or a true Nationalist stance. During August the party had stalls at several agricultural shows in Wales which adds further weight to the statement above. With a membership in the low hundreds it will be interesting to see how the party fares for the rest of the year but particularly in elections come May 2026.

Homeland Party

The Homeland Party has often stated that the average age of its membership is early 30's which is encouraging but also comes with problems, in that, it is difficult to convince younger members that change doesn't take place overnight. Consequently frustration has occurred causing some of those members to essentially throw their toys out of their prams and leave the party in a huff. It must be said that this has caused a few problems but so far the party always seems to bounce back and stand firm on what it stands for and how it intends to deliver its aims. The party is still seen as the main Nationalist party on the scene currently and does have has a loyal core of members.

That said, the conference which took place in Walsall at the Village Hotel on Saturday 27th September was not as grand an event as the previous conferences. Our Editor attended the conference and can confirm that reports on the far-left website of the Searchlight organisation, regarding brawling are complete fantasy. As the day progressed a total of around 30 antifa types were in the hotel grounds protesting but this had no impact on the conference itself, but did cause a few problems for hotel staff and other residents.
Attendance was lower than anticipated with a total of around 50 and the speakers were all party members and officials but nevertheless the speeches were positive. Unfortunately, at the end of the conference the protestors broke into small groups and highlighted how the police, who were in attendance from the start, were poorly organised. Delegates leaving the conference encountered no problems and party stewards and organisers managed our exit safely, sensibly, with heads held high and with the party seeing the event as a great success.

Speakers included Daniel Gale, Party Treasurer, who gave a very detailed explanation of the accounts as would be expected from a party who has always said its finances would be fully transparent Other speakers included Adam Clegg (Eastern Regional Organiser), Alec Cave (National Media Officer), John Carr, the ex-Royal Marine Commando mentioned in our last edition, Mike Lynton (South West RO) and of course, party chairman, Kenny Smith who advised party membership was now at 1400, the number of town and parish councillors had increased to 14 and confirmed his commitment to continue on the track the party was taking.

Which Nationalist Party? (3 of 4)

National Front

Little to report again about the party in general, although current leader Tony Martin regularly posts on his YouTube social media channel and has almost 6.000 subscribers. His videos tend to be confrontational, yet non-aggressive, for example challenging the stance of far left protestors at various patriotic demonstrations. The National Front appear to be almost dead in the water but will not be omitted from our listings quite yet as they still submit accounts to the Electoral Commission.

National Housing Party UK

The NHPUK conference took place on Saturday 23rd August and several of the speeches are available on social media including that of guest speaker Godfrey Bloom, ex-UKIP leader. For a small party NHPUK seem to have some momentum at the moment, with regular updates on Partytalk, their YouTube channel and also on X where posts have reported on positive canvassing returns in Bedford, although we are unable to determine if and when there is an election in the area. Other posts have shown activists in London, apparently leafletting for 2026 elections, which is a positive move for them.

National Rebirth Party

The NRP held their first national meeting and conference on 6th September in Leeds and the party reports that 55 attended, with 8 out of 9 active branches represented. Speeches are available on the party YouTube channel. Again, a party with some momentum on their side having cross-branch meetings across the country towards the end of the year. Yet another party punching above its weight, it does seem as if it is growing and may do well in the future, so we are watching with interest.

Patriotic Alternative

PA will hold its conference in a central location as reported in our last edition. Speakers announced include as PA advertise "notable Nationalist speakers from around the world" including Blair Cottrell, Warren Balogh, Joel Davis, Marcus Follin, Sacha Rossmuller and Steve Laws which does look impressive, along with Mark Collett, Laura Towler, party leader and deputy leader respectively and David Clews from Unity News Network. We look forward with interest to reports on the conference. Having been rocked by splits resulting in the formation of both the Homeland Party and the National Rebirth Party it seems PA are now moving forward apace despite not registering as a political party. This doesn't seem to be restricting them however.
Additionally, PA took part in a successful anti-asylum hostel demonstration in Newark in August which was a good month for them. On the 4th the BBC broadcast a Panorama special centred on the protests following the mass stabbing in Southport last year and as part of the programme PA were contacted for comment regarding the financial support they have provided to political prisoners. It seems the BBC have concerns over this but PA are unrepentant and rightly so. Finally, also in early August Mark Collett set off on a journey to Sweden to speak at the Free Sweden summer festival, a celebration of Swedish culture attended by hundreds of patriots. Arriving in Sweden, Collett was taken aside by border control officers for questioning, left in a room for several hours awaiting the outcome of this and eventually told he was to be deported and banned from Europe for 15 years! No legal representation was provided, nor any details of the process involved in reaching this decision but as a result a man with no criminal record has received what appears to be the longest ban from the Schengen area that certainly PA are aware of. Even after that Collett was not released held for another 25 hours without access to his luggage and without food and water, nor bed to sleep in. Needless to say a full legal claim against the authorities is in hand.

Reclaim Party

No further update is available for Reclaim which begs the question as to why it exists. If nothing changes over the next few months the entry for this party will be deleted. Party leader Laurence Fox continues posting on social media independently.

Reform UK

Reform are now well and truly the party of the moment as their popularity increases and in many polls they are leading with many now conceding that on their current trajectory, Nigel Farage will be Britain's next Prime Minister with a landslide majority of seats in parliament. The party continues to win council seats throughout the country and is doing very well in those it doesn't win. The Conservative Party seem to have all but disappeared and are having very little impact on British politics with Reform taking up the mantle of official opposition albeit with only 5 parliamentary seats (contd. over).

Consequently the party has drawn complaints due to it now receiving an inordinate amount of media coverage, but it has to be said that they are certainly taking the fight to the Labour government, regularly making headlines as a result. Recently they have done so by announcing their blueprint "to deal with the scourge of illegal migration". As part of their plan they will leave the ECHR, repeal and replace the Human Rights Act and pass an Illegal Migration (Mass Deportation) Bill. This has caused outrage in Labour circles with Prime Minister Starmer calling the plans a disgrace and racist. Well, he would, wouldn't he? Earlier on in September Muslim Zia Yusuf, who had resigned as party chairman, was surprisingly announced as head of policy despite his remarks reported in our last issue, such that he felt working for Reform was not a good use of his time. The party conference also took place in early September at the Birmingham NEC and was quite a spectacle taking place over 2 days and including "a packed programme of fringe events, main stage speeches, and lively panel discussions hosted by well-known voices including Mike Graham, Alex Armstrong and Allison Pearson. On the Main Stage, our hosts Dr David Bull and Jeremy Kyle will broadcast live across Britain - with plenty of surprises still to come". One of these surprises, although not at the conference, was the defection of Conservative MP for East Wiltshire, Danny Kruger, to Reform. Kruger was the Conservative Shadow Minister for Work and Pensions and whose role in Reform will be specifically related to preparing for government. Many true Nationalists will feel that Reform is not the answer to our problems but, although there are elements of it we are unhappy with, we see it as the best option we currently have.

Remigration Now

This is a new addition to our list and the group's website states that they are "a dynamic activist and pressure group dedicated to advocating for and promoting the implementation of remigration policies". The group was formed by several young and disillusioned ex-Homeland Party members who felt that party was not hard-line enough and so left. Their website and X profile seems solely to concentrate on remigration and so it remains to be seen the direction they will take and how influential they will be.

Restore Britain

Rupert Lowe's new movement is currently saying all the right things but doesn't seem to be having the impact that was anticipated. It is still early days for the party and it is anybody's guess regarding how they will fare but at present it seems unlikely they will damage the progress of Reform, as was hoped.

UKIP

The appointment of Nick Tenconi as party leader can be said to be a positive move for the party, not yet electorally, but certainly in terms of publicity and the former may follow the latter eventually. Tenconi continues attending many of the anti-asylum protests, (and according to a party email has received "many invites"), making speeches at them and seemingly implying successes are due to his involvement. Unfortunately his stance is for remigration but not total remigration and he says that "ethnats … calling for total remigration is an absolute disgrace". It is unclear if UKIP are currently gaining any ground outside of the 'Nick Tenconi Show' as that is the image we are currently seeing. One positive for the party was back in early September when Kent County Councillor, Amelia Randall, defected from Reform to join them. The next few months will be monitored but the real test for the party will be the May 2026 elections.

White Vanguard

White Vanguard, newly added to our pages in our last edition, are maintaining their social media presence and also some limited activities. The organisation look to be modelling themselves on the Australian National Socialist Network led by Thomas Sewell, and who are having quite an impact in several cities in Australia. That organisation can bring to the streets of several Australian cities, a couple of hundred well-disciplined men for military style marches and it remains to be seen if White Vanguard can replicate that. However the organisation will need to ensure they remain law-abiding to ensure they do not go the same way as National Action, a similar organisation, who were proscribed under the Terrorism Act 2000, in 2016, with several members imprisoned as a result.

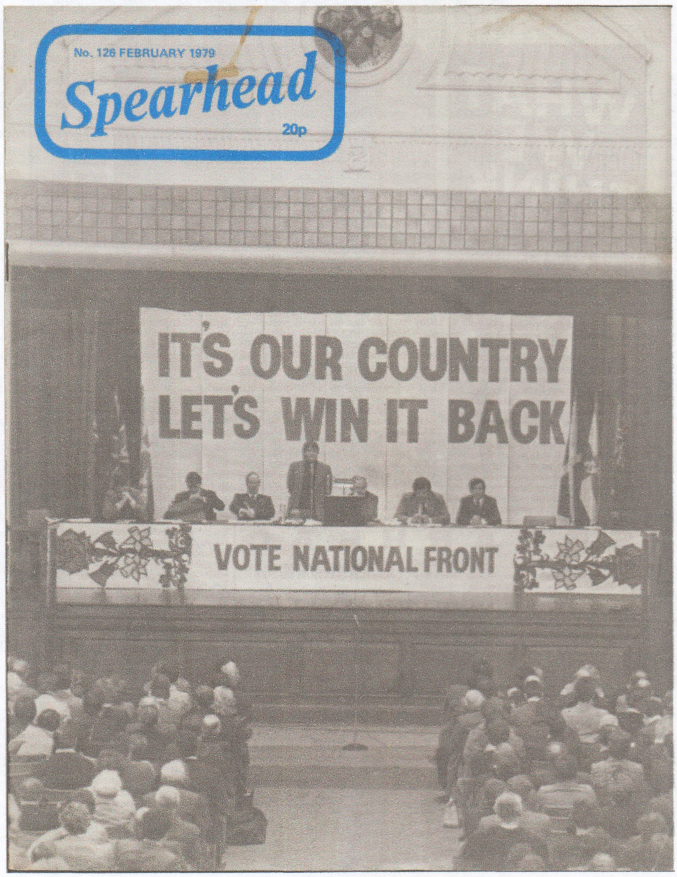
Next Time - Nearly all political parties have submitted their party accounts for 2024 to the Electoral Commission and these are now available for viewing on the EC website. In our Which Nationalist Party? Article we will review those and comment accordingly.

The Best of Spearhead Magazine – Feb 1979 (1)

With this being the traditional political party conference season we thought it appropriate to reproduce, in full, the report on the National Front Conference in 1979, even though we take up 4 pages instead of our usual 3. We do this to show what was achieved almost 50 years ago when the problems in society were far less than they are now and to illustrate what could be achieved now when we really are fighting for our survival. In this edition of Britain, My Nation, our regular feature, in which we reprint extracts from past Spearhead magazines, we look at issue 126 from February 1979. Spearhead magazine, in our opinion, the best Nationalist publication produced for our movement, was at this time, edited by Richard Verrall, with Martin Webster as contributing editor and John Tyndall as publisher.

In this day and age when many of us feel that we are fighting an uphill battle to achieve our aims, we can take much encouragement from this article, in which the sentiments will strike a chord with every true Nationalist. It also highlights the fact that, if all those parties and groups reported on in pages 9-12 joined together we could once again see large Nationalist conferences as the NF held back then and be so much more effective.

It is sad to see that, with such huge problems existing in Britain, and the wealth of talent within the Nationalist movement, it is still not apparent to some that unless we work together we will not win! There is too much to lose should this not happen. There has never been a greater need for us to unite to save our race and nation!



NF A.G.M. IN ELECTION YEAR IS BIGGEST EVER

THE National Front held its 11th Annual General Meeting on Friday 19th and Saturday 20th January, setting new records in attendance and in funds raised. It was the first A.G.M. to be held over two days. At the Friday session in the afternoon, held in the conference suite of a large London hotel, over 200 Regional officials, Organisers, committee delegates and members heard annual reports from Departments of the National Directorate, followed by a conference on organisational affairs.

The main conference day on the Saturday, held at the huge Seymour Hall in the West End of London, saw the largest ever attendance, with 1,000 members packed in the hall by the early afternoon. The meeting would have been even bigger had not bad weather prevented some members from the Midlands and the North travelling to London. Chairman of the A.G.M. was Michael Cowley, a member of the Directorate and Regional Agent for South Lancs. & Cheshire.

The first resolution to be debated, proposed by members from Merton Group, called for the encouragement of NF national activities in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland to mark their national days, in addition to the traditional NF St. George's Day march. It also proposed that Commonwealth Day should also be marked by a national activity which emphasised the National Front concept of a British Commonwealth of White nations. This motion was carried.

Carried unanimously was a resolution proposed by Andrew Brons of the National Directorate and seconded by Nicholas Fridd which not only called for the death penalty against all persons convicted of acts of terrorism, but also for legislation which would make it a serious criminal offence "for any persons or bodies within the United Kingdom to give aid, either directly or indirectly, to those engaged in acts of terrorism anywhere in the world, or to be affiliated to any international bodies giving such aid." This would, for example, render illegal grants to African terrorist groups and also outlaw affiliation to bodies like the World Council of Churches so long as they granted money to terrorists.

Other subjects debated included the reorganisation of local government, Northern Ireland, the National Health Service, Freemasonry and the closed shop. On the latter, the meeting voted with a strong majority in favour of legislation against attempts to enforce closed shop agreements, as well as legislation which would forbid financial donations to political bodies by trade unions and companies unless from a separate fund to which members or shareholders voluntarily contributed.

Lively debate again surrounded the issue of abortion, with a resolution proposed by Richard Verrall and seconded by Melanie Dixon of the Young National Front calling for the repeal of the Abortion Act which has led to abortion on demand, and for abortion to be permitted only on genuine medical grounds. The meeting was told that each year 130,000 unborn children were cremated in hospital incinerators, and that this slaughter could not be considered a matter of private morality. This motion was carried.

For the first time an NF Annual General Meeting warmly welcomed a speaker from the NF overseas. Miss Rosemary Sisson, Chairman of the National Front of Australia. She reported on the growth of the Australian NF and the massive, hysterical onslaught of the media immediately it became known that the NF had been launched there.

A report by YNF Organiser Joe Pearce detailed the remarkable development of the Young National Front in its political and social activities since its formation a year previously at the 1977 Annual General Meeting. This was followed by a resolution from YNF Chairman Philip Gegan and Cambridge undergraduate Nick Griffin calling for the formation within the YNF of a Students' Organisation to organise activities in colleges and universities, and to nurture the future leadership of the party.

Centrepiece of the Saturday conference was the assembling after lunch of as many prospective NF General Election candidates as were present for press and NF photographers. This followed the report of the National Elections Officer, Michael Salt, who told the meeting that so far around 270 constituencies were ready to be fought by the party in the General Election, well on the way to the target of 300 seats. More than 150 prospective Parliamentary candidates crowded to the front of the platform for group photographs with NF Chairman John Tyndall.

The liveliest of the debates concerned Resolution 9, which called for the National Front to participate in the European Elections in order to adopt Trojan horse tactics and to ensure that the NF won publicity with an anti-Market campaign rather than independent anti-Market candidates. Though the National Directorate had already decided by a majority vote not to involve the party in EEC elections, it was felt that this vital issue should be put before the membership. In the event, the A.G.M. voted the same way, rejecting NF involvement in the Euro-Elections both on tactical grounds and on grounds of the basic issue of principle involved.

The main resolutions of the afternoon were those on economic policy and the Race Relations Act. In a resolution proposed by John Tyndall, the meeting expressed a vote of total no-confidence in the ability of the Labour government and of the Opposition parties to produce the policies needed for Britain's economic recovery. It called for strict controls on the flood of foreign imports as part of a policy of self-sufficiency and full employment; state control of the money supply; and drastic tax reductions to restore incentive to Britain's producers. It rejected 'incomes policies' as a means of controlling inflation, affirming that inflation can only be controlled by government control of the money supply in relation to national production and the abolition of the debt system of finance.

In a resolution proposed by Martin Webster the A.G.M. condemned the attempt by the Labour government to intimidate the National Front before the election with bogus Race Relations Act prosecutions. It re-affirmed the party's determination to make 'Stop Immigration – Start Repatriation' a key election issue. The resolution was seconded by Helena Steven, the NF candidate in the Lambeth Central by-election who recently won a tremendous victory against the Labour campaign of persecution when the attempt to commit her for trial on Race Act charges failed in the magistrates court.

The report from the Publicity Department was given by Richard Verrall. In his speech he stressed the enormous impact on our enemies of the recent publication Lifting the Lid Off the Anti-Nazi League, and called for a massive propaganda blitz before the General Election with the new range of recruitment leaflets.

A speech on National Sovereignty by NF Deputy Chairman Andrew Fountaine was followed by a resolution calling for British withdrawal from the EEC, the United Nations and the International Monetary Fund, and opposing association with any institutions aiming to impose supra-national control over British affairs.

Martin Webster, in his speech on behalf of the Activities Department, emphasised that we had entered an entirely new era in terms of the opposition mounted by the forces of the establishment against the only party which threatened it, the National Front.

The traditional awards were given, including the Gold Badges for outstanding services to the party which were received by the winners from the party Chairman. The Branch Recruitment Cup was awarded jointly to Manchester and Leeds, who had tied in membership recruitment over the previous year.

Paul Kavanagh, member of the National Directorate and Chairman of NF Properties Ltd., then reported on one of the most significant events in the party's history, the acquisition and development of Excalibur House. He stressed that with this freehold purchase the company had firmly laid the foundations for the future political development of the party.

There then followed Martin Webster's appeal for funds on the traditional Dutch auction basis. This produced a collection (after a recount!) of record size – £2,054.00!

The meeting closed with a speech from NF Chairman John Tyndall that was a rallying call to the party to go forward into the great electoral battle this year. The full text of that speech is reproduced in this issue. The A.G.M. was without doubt the biggest and most impressive so far, cementing solidarity as we approach the election and causing our enemies who thought they had murdered the NF in 1978 to think again!

Dear Robert

Just thought I would drop you a quick message to say that it was good to meet you at the Heritage and Destiny Conference and have enclosed my subscription (plus donation) after being impressed with the sample copy of Britain, My Nation as bought from you in Preston. I wish you every success in your endeavours and look forward to many more editions in the future.

Anon – England

Editor's response – Thank you for your kind words, subscription and donation. Pleasure to meet you too.

Dear Editor

I note that earlier editions of Britain, My Nation contained the occasional book or music review, but of late there have been none. My wife and I enjoyed these and would like to request that each edition of your magazine contain a review of some sort. These need not necessarily be of a Nationalist slant although that would be preferred. No criticism is intended as we do very much enjoy reading the magazine and send our best wishes to you for it.

Charles King - Leeds

Editor's response – Your comment is welcomed. You'll be pleased to know that more reviews are in the pipeline.

Dear Editor

A few thoughts on elections, if I may. Are there any sure-fire ways to win elections? Not usually, but a few simple observations may be helpful. Ultimately humans of a specified age group are entitled to vote and ultimately if enough voters concur, a certain candidate will win in the race. But what methods are potentially of use? One has to know the local issues for any particular election. One has also to converse with as many potential voters on those issues as one's organisation can, both during and between elections. If any organisation waits until elections are called to discuss issues for that election, one's organisation will be limited as to success.

Leafletting may be useful, but the risk is that as soon as possible, the recipient may deposit the leaflet in the bin. The internet may be useful, but it must be remembered that mostly younger people use Facebook, Instagram, YouTube etc and usually the younger the voter, the less likely he is to vote. In elections the actual number of people who vote can be variable and those individuals who will actually cast a ballot are the target market. From personal observations the more that local voters get upset about local issues, the more likely they are to vote against an incumbent. Going to local meetings about local issues can help, both during and between elections. It will allow one to meet similarly minded individuals to discuss specific issues and to exchange contact information with them. Let as many of the organisation's members work as independently as possible, since this will ultimately increase the total number of contacts with the public.

There may be unusual ways to reach the voter. Consider distributing other organisations publications in the area. It does happen that totally divergent groups share similar views on a particular issue. Use the most cost effective method to get your message across. If mail boxes exist in rural areas, or letter boxes in urban areas, use them. Usually small organisations may have the manpower and the time, but not the funds, to mount a large scale campaign.
